

consortium agreement

(For study at another college/program)

While studying abroad, or through another college in the US, you may be eligible to receive federal and state financial aid. Federal regulations require that your “home” institution—the institution granting your degree—awards the financial aid. As your home institution, Boston College requires this completed Consortium Agreement, as well as all aid application requirements, in order to determine your eligibility for financial aid. A complete list of financial aid requirements can be found at www.bc.edu/undergradaid.

If you are studying away for one semester and will be enrolled at Boston College for the other semester, your financial aid eligibility will be determined for both semesters.

Undergraduate Students: If the Office of Global Education (OGE) has not approved your semester away, you must obtain Dean’s permission in advance in order to be eligible to transfer the courses to your Boston College degree program. You do not have to obtain that permission if you are working with OGE.

Refunds: If the aid you receive for your study away is in excess of any BC charges, a refund will be available to you. Boston College is able to transfer funds to your personal bank account via direct deposit as long as you have previously set that up through My Services. When the funds arrive at Boston College, you can request the refund online through My Services at www.bc.edu/myservices. No refunds will be made to you until all funds are actually received at Boston College. In some cases, especially with Pell and state grants, funds may not be received until as late as two months after the beginning of the semester. If the Consortium Agreement is approved by the Office of Global Education, a refund bill, available for signing, will be sent to the Consortium Agreement holder.
